found it to be more than what I expected. Besides it reached me very fast; you are up to your words, thank you. The content of the book is what I exactly wanted for nurturing our cell groups. Those who want to pursue working Jesus centered cell groups (small groups) please don't miss this book. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Small groups have had a major influence on the growth of the church in recent years. They are an important place for ministry, community and discipleship. Yet all too often small group programming has taken place apart from consideration of its biblical underpinnings. Gareth Icenogle thoroughly examines both Old and New Testaments for the basis of small group ministry. He considers the texts in new ways, providing heightened understanding of their implications for ministry in the context of small groups. Then he turns to the early church to study tradition and practice. In addition, he brings an integration of theological, sociological and educational principles to the biblical text. All through the book, practical applications of these principles offer guidance for setting up and running a biblically based small group ministry program. Those who are working or who hope to work with small groups will find this one-of-a-kind book invaluable.

"In-depth theology and biblical substance excite me. For that reason, I am extremely excited about the contents of this book." (Kenneth C. Hauck, founder and executive director, Stephen Ministries) "Gareth Icenogle has provided what has been missing from the small group literature. Having long had books that address the 'how' of small groups, we now have the book we have been waiting for that addresses the 'why' of small groups. The nineties give evidence of being the golden decade for small groups. Biblical Foundations for Small Group Ministry provides the kind of theological insight that will guide the growth of this movement in healthy ways. This book is a wealth of insights. I cannot recommend it highly enough." (Richard Peace, Fuller Theological Seminary) About the Author Gareth Weldon Icenogle (D.Min., Fuller Theological Seminary) is the senior pastor of West Side Presbyterian Church in Ridgewood, New Jersey. He teaches the Doctor of Ministry course in small groups at Fuller and speaks on small group ministry across the United States and internationally.
