Saving grace
By Paul Charles
This book is currently the saving grace of my college theology course. The majority of theology that we read today is either based on whim, or on the church fathers. The best stuff is based on the church fathers, and therefore it makes sense to read what they wrote as well as having it explained by others. There is a great selection and you'll probably find yourself understanding a great deal more when you have finished!

The purpose of this book is to bring within a single volume a representative selection of extracts from the writings of the Early Christian fathers, covering the main areas of Christian thought. The extracts, for the most part newly translated by the editors, are arranged by topic under the following headings: God, Trinity, Christ, Holy Spirit, Sin and Grace, Tradition and Scripture, Church, Sacraments, Christian Living, Church and Society, and Final Goal. Care has been taken to reflect the full range of writing on these themes - exposition and commentary, homily, epistle and polemic - and the extracts are of sufficient length to show the distinctive flavour of each individual writer. Annotation has been kept to a minimum, but each main section has a short introduction which places the extracts in their particular context within the development of Christian thought.

'... essential reading for students.' Theology
There can be no question that the choice is judicious and that a study of these documents will serve as a valuable introduction to the sources.' The Expository Times
