Anna Carter Florence : Preaching as Testimony before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Preaching as Testimony:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Many great things about this book By George C. Love Many great things about this book. There are three biographies from early American history that our outstanding. A whole book like that would have been tremendous. The book as it is is also tremendous though - The central thread of testimony as preaching is excellent and challenging and forward looking. And the closing portion of the book is just an inspirational read for preachers (I am one) and also I suspect for those who listen to preachers and interact with their ideas - and maybe testify themselves. Great read.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. A different perspective on preachingBy Alan BrownReally enjoyed reading a preaching book that isnt the typical directions, but a direction - as Florence puts it. The historical examples she uses of female preachers are helpful for men and women alike.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five StarsBy CustomerBUT the book was not sampled properly so that makes it very hard to read.

By exploring the historical, theoretical, and practical elements of the tradition of testimony, Anna Carter Florence seeks in this much-anticipated book to establish the historical and contemporary validity of women's preaching and to introduce testimony to a new generation of preachers and teachers. She begins with the stories of three women whose preaching was often described as testimony: Anne Marbury Hutchinson, Sarah Osborn, and Jarena Lee. Then, she examines biblical and theological perspectives on testimony. Finally, she explores how testimony plays out in a preacher's life, offering constructive proposals for preaching as well as helpful guidelines, direction, and exercises.

About the AuthorAnna Carter Florence is Peter Marshall Associate Professor of Preaching at Columbia Theological Seminary in Decatur, Georgia. She is an ordained minister of the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.).
