Arthur Green : Radical Judaism: Rethinking God and Tradition (The Franz Rosenzweig Lecture Series)

before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Radical Judaism: Rethinking God and Tradition (The Franz Rosenzweig Lecture Series):

and evolution, the nature of Torah study, the oneness of all creation, and even the two-state solution! I found myself transfixed and transformed by this short volume that speaks volumes -- thank you Rabbi Green! 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. I thank Rabbi Art Green for sharing a theology that I can understand, that energizes and inspires me. I had originally borrowed the book, and when I could resist no more began to highlight and underline (and yes, I replaced my friend's unmarked copy). 2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Green helps us frame a series of meaningful and relevant questions about theology in this day and age, and gives us a lot to think about.

How do we articulate a religious vision that embraces evolution and human authorship of Scripture? Drawing on the Jewish mystical traditions of Kabbalah and Hasidism, path-breaking Jewish scholar Arthur Green argues that a neomystical perspective can help us to reframe these realities, so they may yet be viewed as dwelling places of the sacred. In doing so, he rethinks such concepts as God, the origins and meaning of existence, human nature, and revelation to construct a new Judaism for the twenty-first century.

"Filled with interesting observations . . . deliberately provocative [and] accessibly written." Rabbi David Wolpe, Jewish Journal
