Michael W. Lemberger, Leigh Michaels : Saint Patrick's: Georgetown Iowa before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Saint Patrick's: Georgetown Iowa:

Built in the 1860s by Irish immigrants who quarried the brown sandstone by hand and hauled it four miles with ox teams, Saint Patrick's Church has stood in Monroe County, Iowa, for a century and a half. The great rock church known as "the cathedral in the wilderness" remains strong and solid, and the parishioners are even sturdier. Though families have spread far and wide, St. Patrick's Georgetown remains close to the hearts and minds of the people. No matter where they live, they're from Georgetown.
