1 of 3 people found the following review helpful. Review of Stedman's Surinam By Family Researcher I selected this book due to my genealogy connecting me to this Stedman family. The book enabled me to learn about the author personally plus gave more genealogy with his family noted, but also was quite enlightening about life during slavery times in the British-held possessions....It gave horrible anecdotes of the severity treatment and cruelty to others. Although this treatment cannot be denied, within those times true love was discovered between the races which was much more difficult to profess a love between a slave and British officer. His love also was shown when he later returned to England but sent for his Surinam-born son against the feelings of his other children. The book was quite good, giving intimate historical information as well as genealogical information. 0 of 1 people found the following review helpful. This abridgment of the Prices' acclaimed 1988 critical edition is based on Stedman's original, handwritten manuscript, which offers a portrait at considerable variance with the 1796 classic. The unexpurgated text, presented here with extensive notes and commentary, constitutes one of the richest and most evocative accounts ever written of colonial life and one of the strongest indictments ever to appear against New World slavery.

"This abridged edition includes about half of Stedman's original text and over a third of the original plates... The text itself is made more readable by moderate editorial changes in spelling, punctuation, and word order... A well-accomplished abridgment of the editors' own 1988 edition." (Colonial Latin American Historical ) About the Author Richard Price is the author of twelve books, including an earlier work on the Saramaka people, the award-winning First Time: The Historical Vision of an Afro-American People. He is coeditor, with Sally Price, of John Gabriel Stedman's Narrative of a Five Year Expedition against the Revolted Negroes of Surinam. He has taught at Stanford, Yale, Johns Hopkins, Minnesota, and the University of Paris.
